

Hear what the audiences are saying about...

“Positive and meaningful because I see it as a movement from silence to verbal. It was funny but informative. We came for information, so we were informed...information is not always in print.”

Donna, Lifespan/Miriam Hospital

“The message to me was women in chains making the break to freedom; the right to come together for conversation about our bodies.”

Ardena, Rhode Island Governor’s Office

As a pre-menopausal female (According to the Doctor's diagnosis!), I enjoyed hearing the "truth" about this (divine time in a woman's life)! It is so true, society speaks of a woman until about the age of 40 years then we become invisible...apparently, society believes all women over 40 years fall off the planet!

Deborah, Johnson & Wales University

“I enjoyed all the characters but my favorite probably was the older woman because she has been released from the silence. And she has an urgent, enthusiastic desire to tell her story.”

Randel, Out of the Woods

In February, I was diagnosed with a small breast cancer and in April I had a bilateral mastectomy. As a social worker, I've always been in a position to provide services and now I find myself a recipient of services. During your performance, I laughed and found great sorrow in the stories you shared. Performance through art is a powerful way to deliver your message to women experiencing similar situations. Your performance came at such a great time in my life.”

Kathy, Social Worker
